THE CONVENTION

A Good Day's Work By

The President Makers.

Names Proposed for the Nomination.

The city was ablaze with excitement last night; torchlight processions, marching delegations headed by bands of music, sky rockets, Roman candles, Greek fire and calcium lights flashed from numerous corners; shouts for the different favorites in the Presidential race rent the air; the surging to and fro of the thousands of strangers in the city mingling with the native population, who all seemed to be out to enjoy a spectacle the like of which has not been seen since the war; speech making at all the prominent hotels, around which were gathered dense masses of people, attracted by the strains of music from the visiting brass bands; the serenading of newspaper offices—all reminded the looker on that the country was in danger (?) and that these demonstrations were necessary for its salvation.

Meetings of the different factions were held. At Pike's Opera-house the Bristol followers, to the number of nearly two thousand, listened to speeches from Paul Chadbourne, of Williams College, Massachusetts, and Hon. W. C. Goodloe, of Kentucky.

When the meeting adjourned a torchlight procession was formed, and with their Bristol banners flung to the breeze, the line marched to the Gibson House, where the band serenaded the Republican Reform Club of New York; thence to the Burnet House to pay their respects to Hon. John M. Harlan, and from thence to the Grand Hotel, where Hon. George William Curtis was serenaded.

About 9 o'clock the Columbus Cadet Band, under command of the Republican Executive Committee, halted in front of the Gazette office.

Calls were made for Deacon Smith, that good man, who in response took a position in the window of his editorial room and harangued the crowd, often interrupted, however, by the blare of discordant sounds which filled the air. The good Deacon remarked, "I suppose you would all like me to tell you who is going to be nominated, but that is just what I have been trying to find out, and I find that that the more I learn the less I know. At last accounts all the candidates were considerably ahead."

At the Gibson House several colored delegates from the South spoke in favor of their favorite—Morton. At Jake Aug's Club Rooms on Vine street the Committee on Resolutions was at work, presided over by General Joseph R. Hawley, of Connecticut. Senator Jones, of Nevada, stated that several ladies were at his headquarters across the street waiting to be heard as to their rights before the Committee. He read a document drawn up by one of them, bearing the signature of Margaret V. Longley, of the Ohio Woman Suffrage Association, asking that it might be incorporated as a plank in the National Republican platform, favoring the appointment of women to certain offices, and giving them equal suffrage with men. On motion, Mrs. S. J. Spencer, of Washington City, was permitted to present her views to the Committee, which she did in a speech that gained her the closest attention.

In the parlors of the different hotels where the leaders of factions congregated, all was animation and work. A combination was sought to be formed for the slaughtering of Blaine, but which it is now understood failed utterly. On the other hand, the Blaine men sought an alliance with Hayes' supporters, but neither faction seemed to command success, leaving the situation early this morning in the same shape as at the Convention's close.

By half-past 9 o'clock this morning the tide of travel had set in for the Exposition Building. Street cars were loaded down with delegates and visitors making their way to the scene of conflict; all the avenues of approach were lined with people heading for the Hall.

Curtis' Band was on the ground early, discoursing sweet music as the filling-up process was going on. Delegates straggled in, took the places assigned them and commenced the manipulation. The air was close.

The lucky holders of tickets for balcony seats took possession early. As usual, the faithful members of the press were in their seats long before the Convention was called to order, and it was after 11 o'clock before everything was ready for business.

Permanent Chairman McPherson announced at 11:15 prayer by Rev. Geo. K. Beecher, of Cincinnati, and Mr. Beecher offered up prayer, most of the members of the Convention standing during the prayer and everything on the floor remaining perfectly quiet and attentive. Although this was an hour after the time announced for the reassembling of the Convention, visitors continued to pour into the balconies during the time occupied in prayer.

Mr. George F. Hoar, of Massachusetts, presented a memorial of the National Women's Suffrage Association, which, under the rules, was to go to the Committee on Resolutions at once.

Mr. Hoar moved the rules be suspended, and Mrs. Spencer be heard for ten minutes in favor of the resolutions.

Mrs. Spencer said: "The request for a hearing would not have been made if, on yesterday, the speakers in the Convention had remembered that the women of this country had no voice in the proceedings. The platform of the party says that four million of people had been enfranchised. But where are the women? are they to be excluded forever. The party professes to be one of perfect liberty and equality, but the wives, daughters and mothers of the Republic are excluded. It begins to dawn that there are women in the land. After Fred. Douglass' speech she had reminded him that to Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe he owed a debt of gratitude greater than to any one who ever lived. She wanted the principle established that women belong to themselves. The Republicans promised to give their attention to this subject in 1872, and the promise had been broken, and now in this Centennial year she wanted the party to bring to their sides the women of the Republic."

The Committee on Rules made long reports. Among other rules it adopts the regulations of the House of Representatives, as far as applicable, and postpones the balloting for President and Vice President until after the adoption of the platform.

The rules, as reported by the Committee, except the one providing for the adoption of the platform previous to the balloting, were adopted.

Mr. Eugene Hale objected to that, and it was left open to discussion.

He then offered an amendment striking out that rule and allowing the selection of candidates first and the adoption of the platform afterwards. Mr. Hale, in a speech, supported his amendment, and was followed by Mr. Giles Hudgins, of New York, who said in 1860 the Republicans made a platform placing a candidate upon it. It is an absurdity, said he, to attempt to put a man on horseback before you have the horse.

Mr. Hale withdrew the amendment, and the rules as presented by the Committee were adopted.

A resolution was offered by Mr. Sullivan, of New York, that after each ballot a recess of thirty minutes be taken for conference.

A Rhode Island delegate moved to amend by ordering that delegates desiring a recess be required to plainly indicate what they want—whether cotton, produce or cash.

On motion, the matter was laid on the table.

The Committee on Credentials then made a report, stating that all the delegations were complete except North Carolina and Nevada; that there was one absentee in each of these delegations, and recommended that the States be allowed the full vote. The report also recommended the admission of the Smith delegation from Alabama, the Conover delegation from Florida, and the Bowen delegation from the District of Columbia.

A minority report was read by Mr. Harris, of Nevada, recommending the seating of the Spencer delegation from the State of Alabama.

After the report was read, it was moved that all of it be adopted save that relating to the Alabama delegation.

Mr. Cessna, of Pennsylvania, moved an amendment that the name of S. J. Bowen, of the District of Columbia delegation, be stricken out and that of Frederick Douglass substituted.

After considerable discussion Mr. Cessna withdrew his proposition, and all the majority reports were cheerfully accepted, that relating to the Alabama contest. The question then arose on the two reports in reference to the delegation from that State, and a long and bitter debate followed, participated in by Messrs. Cumback, Tyler, Adkins and Fumero in favor of the minority report, and Messrs. Sullivan, Ensor and others for the majority report.

The vote being taken as to the adoption of the minority report, resulted in its rejection by a vote of 364 to 375. This seats the Smith delegates, and is considered a Blaine victory.

Platform.

When, in the economy of Providence, this land was to be purged of human slavery, and when the strength of government of the people, by the people, and for the people was to be demonstrated, the Republican party came into power. Its deeds have passed into history, and we look back to them with pride. Incited by their memories to high aims for the good of our country and mankind, and looking to the future with unflinching courage, hope and purpose, we, the representatives of the party in National Convention assembled, make the following declaration of principles:

1. The United States of America is a nation, not a league. By the combined workings of the National and State Governments, under their respective Constitutions, the rights of every citizen is secured at home, and protected abroad, and the common welfare promoted.

2. The Republican party has preserved these governments to the hundredth anniversary of the nation's birth, and they are now embodiments of the great truths spoken in its cradle—that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain inalienable rights, among which are life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness; that for the attainment of these ends governments have been instituted among men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed. Until these truths are cheerfully obeyed, or if need be, vigorously enforced, the work of the Republican party is unfinished.

3. The permanent pacification of the southern section of the Union and the complete protection of all its citizens in the free enjoyment of all their rights and duties, to which the Republican party stands ardently pledged; the power to provide for the enforcement of the principles embodied in the recent constitutional amendments is vested by those amendments in the Congress of the United States, and we declare it to be the solemn obligation of the Legislative and Executive Departments of the Government to put into immediate and vigorous exercise all their Constitutional powers for removing any just causes of discontent on the part of any class, and for securing to every American citizen complete liberty and exact equality in the exercise of all civil, political and public rights. To this end we imperatively demand a Congress and a Chief Executive whose courage and fidelity to these duties shall not falter until these results are placed beyond dispute or recall.

4. In the first act of Congress, signed by President Grant, the National Government assumed to remove any doubts of its purpose to discharge all just obligations to the public creditors, and "solemnly" pledged its faith to make provision at the earliest practicable period for the resumption of the United States notes in coin. Commercial prosperity, public morals and national credit demand that this promise be fulfilled by a continuous and steady progress to specie payment.

The following is an abstract of the concluding paragraphs of the platform: It recommends an amendment to the Constitution prohibiting the application of any public funds for the benefit of public schools under sectarian control. It asserts that revenues must largely be derived from duties on exports, and that the laws must be so shaped in the interests of American industry.

It is the duty of the Government to so modify foreign treaties that the same protection be afforded naturalized as are enjoyed by native born citizens.

Recognizes with approval the steps toward equal rights of women, and says the demand for further rights must be treated with consideration.

It is the immediate duty of Congress to investigate the subject of Chinese immigration, looking towards its abolition.

The pledges to soldiers and sailors must be fulfilled.

It is the duty of Congress to prohibit the practice of polygamy, that relic of barbarism, and we demand such legislation as will secure this end.

That General Grant, for his eminent services both in war and peace, deserves the everlasting gratitude of the American people.

It charges the Democratic party with being the same in character and spirit as when it openly sympathized with treason; with being false and imbecile as to the financial question, and with showing itself incapable of managing the Government.

Mr. Pierce, of Massachusetts, moved to strike out the resolution relating to the Chinese question.

The motion was fully discussed by Mr. Pierce, Mr. Dutcher and Hon. Geo. W. Curtis in favor of striking out, and Senator Jones and other gentlemen from the Far West against.

Motion lost by the following vote: ayes 215, nays 632.

Edwin J. Davis, of Texas, offered a resolution striking out of the platform that section relating to the financial policy, and moved a substitute, which was voted down.

The President then announced that nominations for the positions of President and Vice President of the United States would be in order.

On motion, the roll of States was called, and Connecticut, through Hon. Stephen W. Kellogg, presented the name of Hon. Marshall Jewell.

Indiana, through Hon. Richard W. Thompson, of Terre Haute, offered the name of Gov. O. P. Morton. Unanimous consent being given Hon. P. S. B. Pinchback, of Louisiana, that gentleman stepped upon the platform and seconded the nomination in an eloquent speech.

Kentucky, through her representative, Gen. John M. Harlan, presented the name of Benjamin H. Brewster. When his name fell upon the ears of the vast assemblage shouts arose which continued for several minutes.

Hon. Luke P. Poland, of Vermont; Hon. George William Curtis, of New York, and Hon. Richard H. Dana, of Massachusetts, seconded the nomination.

Maine responded to the call by presenting the name of James G. Blaine; the nomination made by Hon. Robt. K. Ingersoll, of Illinois, and Henry A. Turner, of Georgia.

An Awkward Pause.

[From the Newark (N. J.) Union.]
A young gentleman undertook to relate a circumstance of some Sunday evening in the presence of some young ladies. He commenced as follows:

"A lady friend and myself last Sunday evening went to bed—"

"This is a Sunday morning the old lady bounced him out of the house, and the next day the old gentleman met him in the street and asked him for an apology."

"I was about to say," commenced the young man, "that a lady friend and myself went to bed—"

When a thrust from the old man's cane started him back several feet, upon which he exclaimed at the top of his voice:

A Double Tragedy in Pennsylvania.

By American Press Association to the STAR.
TITUSVILLE, Pa., June 15.—Yesterday afternoon a man named Nick Baker, a resident of Columbia Farm Station, aged twenty-one years, entered the house of a Mr. Dougherty, of that place, it is supposed, for the purpose of ravishing Mrs. Dougherty. Being foiled in this attempt, in order to screen himself, he shot her, the ball entering her left breast, from the effects of which she died in twenty minutes.

A man named Thos. McCool, hearing the shot, went to the house to ascertain the trouble. Baker meeting him at the door, fired his two remaining shots at him. McCool turned to flee, but stumbled, falling on his face, when Baker pounced upon him, stabbing him several times in the back and shoulder, which will prove fatal. Baker is confined. There is a strong feeling in favor of lynching the murderer.

Germany and Spain.

By American Press Association to the STAR.
BERLIN, June 15.—The Official Gazette states that the imperial government, some time ago, opened negotiations with Spain for the purpose of freeing the German residents in Cuba from the extraordinary war taxes levied there.

Difficulties arose respecting the interpretation of the treaties on this subject, and a series of difficulties, including the general political situation, were put forward as preventing Spain from acceding to Germany's demand. Germany, however, has now succeeded in obtaining the concession that the process of distraint and the forced sales of property for the payment of said taxes shall be suspended in cases of German residents until an understanding is obtained.

The Belgian Riots.

By American Press Association to the STAR.

Many thousands marched through the streets shouting "Down with the Ministers." The mob attacked and wrecked a Catholic institution. The gendarmes charged upon the rioters, and several persons were wounded. A number of arrests have been made.
